

After speaking with the medical examiner's office, it was found that the Fentanyl was illicit and not pharmaceutical grade. I requested a review of the stomach contents and saw that Eric also had a small amount of Quetiapine in his stomach contents. Eric did not have a prescription for Quetiapine but his wife had a prescription as well as the pills at their home. She initially told me that she occasionally used the pills as a sleeping aid. When speaking to the medical examiner and her colleagues, this use is not intended use of the medication and it is instead shown as an anti-psychotic. Since the wife's medication was found in Eric's system, I would like to request the medical records of his wife, K.R., to see what the medication was actually prescribed for, when it was prescribed and any pertinent information about this medical history.
